NEW PAPER MONEY.

Beautiful Designs for the New Silver Cer-

The most beautiful piece of paper money ever produced by the United States Treasury is the new two-dollar silver certificates, first proofs of which, on cardboard, were shown a Washington Star reporter privately at the Bureau ton Star reporter privately at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Although they were indorsed on the margin by Secretary Foster's handwriting as "approved," they had not previously been exhibited to anyone save a few high officials in the department. Superintendent of Engraving Casilear regards this new promise to pay as his clied d'œuvre and gleefully delles the counterfeiters to imitate it with success. Their difficulty in performing such a task would unquestionably be greatly increased by the circumstance that the distinctive paper directed by law to be used in the unquestionably be greatly increased by the circumstunce that the distinctive paper directed by law to be used in the future for the printing of all of Uncle Sam's negotiable securities is to be employed as a material for the certificate in question for the first time. The first batch of it has reached the treasury, and within a few weeks people will be carrying around in their pockets two-dollar bills of fresh device.

It is not true, as has been reported, that new designs have been adopted for the certificate, mainly because there is a plausible counterfeit of the present one in circulation. This fact has had influence in the matter, but the change is made chiefly for the reason that the face of the old bill is not satisfactory, and it is thought just as well to substitute a new picture at the same time with the introduction of the distinctive paper. The portrait on the face of the present certificate of General Hancock is not well adapted to its purposes in the arrangement of light and shade, so that after passing through a few hands it gets dim and is practically effaced. It may fairly be said that paper money of small denominations requires more careful execution than is necessary for larger bills, inasmuch as it must go through so much more wear and tear. Two-dollar bills, it is thought, have arger mis, insemuch as it must go through so much more wear and tear. Two-dollar bills, it is thought, have quite as much handling to suffer as those for SI each because they are so convenient in making change, and manufacturers use them to a great extent in paying off.

The new $2 silver certificate is really The new $2 silver certificate is really a work of art in the highest sense. In the middle of its face is an oval portrait of the late Secretary Windom, with his name beneath, which in point of lifelike quality and effectiveness of execution is unequaled by any other production of the sort printed on Treasury securities since the manufacture of paper money in this country was first berum. The rest of the design was first begun. The rest of the design consists merely of the conventional legend gracefully drawn in lettering, with a figure "2" in each corner, sur-rounded by some curlicue of the geo-rounded by some curlicue of the geometric lathe.

Of geometric lathework the back is a wonder. Nothing so elaborate in this sort of mechanical engraving, which is the despair of the counterfeiter, has been produced hitherto in the manufacture of paper money in any country of the world. The counterfeiter will find this new certificate a more difficult subject for imitation than he has ever yet encountered. People have asked: "Why should not the counterfeiter himself procure a geometric lathe?" So he could, very easily, but to reproduce with its aid the patterns he would imitate is an impossibility as absolute as would be that of undoing the lock of a permutation safe without the formula. If you will for a moment gaze upon the complicated concentric and eccentric devices on the reverse side of any United States note or certificate, considering that they can only be reproduced by arduous copying with engraving by hand, you will perceive under what difficulties the luckless forger of Uncle Sam's promises to pay is compelled to labor. Certain newspaper reports have circulated the notion that this unhappy victim of a mania for imitation cun ease his foil by photographic and other processes, but the fact is that he finds all such assistance of little use.

The back of the new certificate is en-graphic and other processes, but the fact is that he finds all such assistance of little use.

The back of the new certificate is engraved with a view to showing as conspicuously as possible the two strips of silk fiber, each about as wide as ene's thumb, that run across the paper on which the designs described are to be printed, dividing the length of the each bill into three parts. For this purpose portions of the surface are left white. In the middle is an oval containing a legend, on either side of which is an elaborate piece of inthework with a big figure "2" in the center and little "twos scattered about the points where the lines converge. There are other features of the design, including some very difficult small lettering, which are intended to embarrass the counterfeiter.

A Star reporter saw a ream of the distinctive paper at the Treasury Department to-day. It looked somewhat like a fine quality of note paper, foolscap size, with two bands of closely scattered red and blue fibers running from top to bottom. Each sheet was intended for the printing of four certificates or notes. The fibers are merely silk threads bought from a New York importing from by the contractor who works for the Treasury, cut into lengths of a quarter of an inch and run through the paper sheets, No little difficulty was found at first in making the process satisfactory, and the Government pays somewhat more for the material than it used to for the Plain article.

Work on the West Virginia Central.

The burning of the factory of the Youngstown Eridge Company, at Youngstown Eridge Company, at Youngstown, Ohio, on September 4, delayed the delivery of several bridges that the company was building for the West Virginia Central & Pittsburgh railroad. The Lanaconning bridge, a structure of two spans, truss and girder, each span 82 feet in length, was completed in the shop and ready for shipment when the fire took place and had to be rebuilt. The Westernport bridge was a single span of 90 feet, and was also almost done. The Wills creek bridge, almost the same as the Lanaconning bridge in length and structure, would have been on the ground by this Work on the West Virginia Central.

"Woman's Suffer-age" "Woman's Suffer-age" was what a witty woman called that period of life which all middle-aged pass through, and during which so many seem to think they must suffer—that Nature intended it so. The same lady added: "If you don't believe in 'woman's suffer-age,' there is one ballot which will effectually defeat it—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription." This is true, not only at the period of middle life. but at all ages when women suffer life, but at all ages when women suffer from uterine diseases, painful irregular-ities, inflammation, ulceration or pro-lapsus, the "Favorite Prescription" so strengthens the weak or diseased organs and enriches the blood, that years of health and enjoyment are added to life.
